Trimite Invest in Enterprise Content Management Software as Part of a Major ICT Refresh!

Trimite Britain's leading Industrial Paint Manufacturer, has chosen Datum International's ECM system KnowledgeWorker® to replace its existing Lotus Notes software. Implemented by FD Systems, KnowledgeWorker® will provide Trimite with the ability to automate and improve its complex business processes, while ensuring that valuable corporate information can be retained to create a powerful corporate knowledgebase.

This move follows Trimite's new controlling Private Shareholder Group that is focused on investing in customer-facing activities to improve lead-times, quality and service levels. Trimite is driving these changes with the comprehensive updating of its current ICT platform to ensure that future growth plans can be met. This includes: addressing the existing hardware by implementing Sage line 1000 software and using Datum's advanced ECM solution KnowledgeWorker®. KnowledgeWorker® is already being earmarked for future projects and will eventually be rolled out across the company.

Nigel Griffith of FD Systems explains, "When analysing the business needs at Trimite it became clear that the communication workflow and the highly regulated nature of the industry dictated the need for an enterprise wide content management rules based workflow solution. The KnowledgeWorker® system was an obvious recommendation its ease of use and seamless integration with Sage 1000 made it a clear component in the solution design."

Trevor Cole of Datum International said, "This installation of our evolving ECM solution KnowledgeWorker® emphasises the power of the software to flex its uses almost on a daily basis through fast changing organisations such as Trimite. This is another great win for our partner FD Systems and proves without a doubt KnowledgeWorker®'s ability to enhance any business!"
